Falling

Chapter 1 by Casey Harwick

I've been falling. Falling for years and years and years. The end never comes. Falling through clouds and space, never to see solid ground.

My entire life has been filled with darkness around me. Light can't seem to catch me. I've never seen a person, never felt anything. Never to understand the world.

Chapter 2 by CAPSLOCK

I hear a whooshing sound to my left, and I look over. There's a person, someone like me. She smiles a smile, thinly veiling pain and frustration. I don't try to hide mine.

She tries to say something, and she's gone. Off to another place in this infinite abyss. I'm disappointed, but I wouldn't have been able to hear what she said anyway. I continue to plummet through the darkness, when I wonder: How did I see her if she was in this darkness?
